BECAUSE EVERY STUDENT IS A WRITER WITH A VOICE

Because every student is a writer with a voice, a writer's guidebook by Barbara Waller and Mike Rumrill is a must-read for every CCCC attendee. For more information or to request your review copy, visit macmillanlearning.com/english.

Stop by the Bedford/St. Martin's booth at the 2018 CCCC or visit macmillanlearning.com/english.
Find opportunity and value with CCCC

Take a closer look at the Conference on College Composition and Communication

CCCC is the leading organization in writing studies, offering not only the largest meeting of writing specialists in the world every spring but also a relevant and strategic repository of resources, research, and networking channels to help you be your best.

- CCCC’s extensive grants and awards program provides opportunities to be recognized for your scholarship, to apply for funds for your next research project, or to receive travel support to learn from and with your colleagues.

- College Composition and Communication maintains a space for thoughtful examination of current issues in the field.

- CCCC sponsors advocacy efforts, inviting you to engage with legislative and regulatory issues that matter to you at the federal, state, and local levels.

There’s a lot we can do together as members of CCCC. The first step is simple. If you’re not a member, join CCCC by subscribing to College Composition and Communication today, and if you are a member, share the benefits of CCCC by telling a friend.

WHY WE ARE IN KANSAS CITY

We’re here because you’re here. As “All In” partners with the composition community we made the decision to attend this year’s conference as we typically do. But we know this isn’t a typical meeting. We want you to know that Bedford/St. Martin’s and all of Macmillan Learning are strongly committed to promoting inclusion, diversity, tolerance, and social justice. And as longtime educational publishers, our continuing support of composition and literature instructors extends to everyone.

Follow the hashtag #BSM4C18, to see our full range of events for this year’s conference.

And we encourage you to visit our community site for English instructors (community.macmillanlearning.com) to share your thoughts about teaching techniques and classroom issues.
